Discover And Create At Lowell Makes

About Lowell Makes

Welcome to Lowell Makes, where creativity meets community in the heart of Lowell, MA! We're a vibrant, community-run makerspace where artists, engineers, tinkerers, and dreamers come together to share tools, knowledge, and inspiration.

Founded in 2013, Lowell Makes began with a simple yet powerful idea: to create a space where makers of all kinds could pool their talents and resources to build something bigger than the sum of its parts. Since then, we've been growing, evolving, and finding new ways to inspire creativity and innovation.

Whether you're building your first project or prototyping your next big invention, Lowell Makes is the place to experiment, create, and connect.

Our Mission

Lowell Makes is a collection of open workshops and laboratories where members and students can collaborate to learn, share, and hone crafts of all kinds. We are focused on providing an inclusive space for education, entrepreneurship, and engagement with the community of Lowell, Massachusetts, and beyond.

Our space is equipped with a wide variety of tools, machines, materials, computers and other resources where individuals can gain and practice modern skills with state-of-the-art technology, access to resources they could not otherwise, and a community of creative minded people who make all kinds of things.

Lowell Makes is used for brainstorming, visioning, problem solving, design, prototyping, custom fabrication and repair. The makerspace is also used for classes and workshops for both members and visitors in a wide variety of subjects. Classes are led both by members and invited visitors who have knowledge of skills, trades and technologies. Anything creative can happen here.

"Art is the Handmaid of Human Good."

This isn't just the motto of the City of Lowell—it's a reminder of our rich industrial and artistic heritage, which continues to inspire us every day.
